

Reel Lives – A FREE documentary filmmaking workshop for young people

Do you want to learn to make a film?

Do you have a story to tell about life in London?

With the help of professional filmmakers, you'll learn to plan, shoot and edit your own short film.

Inspired by the different lives and cultures of London, the finished films will be shown during a special screening at the Times BFI London Film Festival.

Workshops will take place at BFI Southbank from 4 - 8 and 18 - 22 August.

Places must be booked in advance and priority will be given to young people aged 16-19 who live or study in Lambeth or Southwark.

For more information, please email:

alicia.blumross@bfi.org.uk

call or text 07747 018 474

Some participants will also have the opportunity to become a BFI Street Genius and learn more about how a film festival is put together during a paid work experience. Let us know if you'd like to hear more.

Project funded by

SOWF is a project sponsored and supported by the South Bank and Bankside Cultural Quarter which aims to put young people at the heart of the arts as visitors, creators and advocates.

